Breaking Records As A Manhattan Broker

Brown Harris Stevens

As Senior Vice President and Managing Director at Brown Harris Stevens, Kathy Sloane was the firm's top producing broker in both 2004 and 2005. Sloane was named Broker of the Year by the luxury residential real estate firm in 2005, breaking all sales performance records for the company.

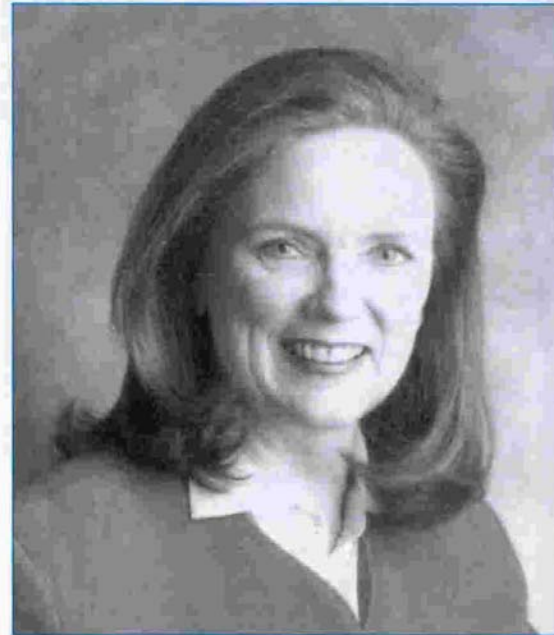

Sloane was recently named the exclusive broker for a $49 million triplex at boutique condominium 823 Park Avenue, the most expensive apartment ever to go on sale on Park Avenue. She is the exclusive broker for all of the luxury residential units available for sale at 823 Park Avenue. She has also been named the exclusive broker for the $31.5 million duplex penthouse at Trump Park Avenue. The apartment was recently home to The Veranda Showcase, featuring rooms created by a number of today's top designers.

Sloane joined Brown Harris Stevens in 1986 and has been a top producing broker there ever since. From Manhattan's finest cooperatives to its most charming studios, Sloane's clients are well served by her knowledge of the city from Tribeca, The Village, Chelsea, and Gramercy to the Upper Eastside and Upper Westside, as well as her vast knowledge of luxury real estate buyers in Manhattan.

Beyond her personal expertise, Sloane calls upon the resources of Brown Harris Stevens Residential Management LLC, which manages many of the city's top buildings. In addition, Brown Harris Stevens also serves as the exclusive affiliate of Christie's Great Estates, Inc., a subsidiary of Christie's International PLC, the world's oldest fine arts auctioneer.

Sloane's list of clients includes well-known New Yorkers, national and international families with backgrounds in industry, the arts and politics, and a former President of the United States and his family. Senior management at many of the most important banks and law firms in the world also refer their top customers to Sloane.

New York magazine and New York Living have both named Sloane one of the top brokers in New York luxury real estate. Her impressive record of achievements includes selling over one billion dollars in New York residential real estate. She has consistently been a top-producing broker for Brown Harris Stevens over the past several years. Sloane is the Broker Specialist for a number of premier Fifth Avenue cooperatives, and she is recognized for her absolute discretion and professionalism. Fluent in French, she is
